About Me

After 6 years in social care, I pivoted into web development which I am passionate about because it allows me to leverage my technical skills, my creativity, and my aptitude for communication. Previous positions in the hospitality and care sectors allowed me to hone my interpersonal and management skills, making me a great team player and confident in client-facing roles. My experience has cultivated my ability to distill and convey complex information to effectively engage diverse audiences. Working in social care also gave me first-hand insight into the importance of making websites accessible and inclusive for all users, which I strongly care about. Having recently graduated from Noroff Oslo's front-end development program, I am excited to embark on my new career path.
